General information

Is this form for you?

The working income tax benefit (WITB) is for low-income individuals and families who have earned income from employment or business.

You cannot apply for the WITB advance payments for 2018 if you became or ceased to be a resident of Canada in 2018.

What are the WITB advance payments?

The WITB advance payments represent a maximum of 50% of the WITB refundable tax credit that you can claim on your 2018 tax return. Any WITB that you are entitled to and do not get as advance payments will be credited to you when we assess your 2018 tax return.

WITB Disability supplement

If you are eligible for the WITB and the disability tax credit (DTC), fill out Part 3 of this form to request disability supplement advance payments for 2018. This will be included as part of your WITB advance payments.

You are eligible for the DTC if we have an approved Form T2201, Disability Tax Credit Certificate, on file for you.

When should you apply for the advance payments?

To receive the WITB advance payments, you must apply every year. You need to apply after January 1, 2018, and before September 1, 2018. Applications received after August 31, 2018, will not be processed.

Who should get the advance payments?

If you have a spouse or common-law partner, the spouse or common-law partner who expects to have the higher working income in 2018 should get the WITB advance payments for the family unless one of you qualifies for the disability supplement. In that case, the spouse or common-law partner who qualifies for the disability supplement should get the advance payments.

If both of you qualify for the disability supplement, the person with the higher expected working income in 2018 should get the advance payments.

If both of you qualify for the disability supplement, only one person will get the disability supplement in advance payments. The other person must claim the supplement on their tax return.

When will you get the WITB advance payments?

Your WITB advance payment will be divided by the number of remaining payments for the year and will be paid in equal instalments. The payments are issued in April, July and October 2018, and January 2019. If the total of your annual WITB advance payments calculated is less than $100, you will not get any advance payments. However, if you are eligible for the WITB, you can still claim it on your tax return.

Why do you need to file an income tax and benefit return?

If you receive the WITB advance payments, you have to file a tax return. We will not issue WITB advance payments for subsequent years until we assess your 2018 tax return.

At the beginning of 2019, we will send you a statement of the WITB advance payments for you to use when filling out your 2018 tax return. You will get any additional WITB that you are entitled to when you file your 2018 tax return. However, if the WITB advance payments you received in 2018 were more than the total WITB you are entitled to, you may have to repay the difference when you file your 2018 tax return.

When should you contact us?

You must tell us if your situation changes, as your advance payments may be affected.

After you apply, use My Account at canada.ca/my-cra-account, My CRA mobile app at canada.ca/cra-mobile-apps or call at 1-800-959-8281 to tell us about any of the following changes:

- you move (you can also send Form RC325, Address change request);
- you get your payments by direct deposit and your banking information changes; or
- your marital status changes (you can also send Form RC65, Marital Status Change).

Notes

Do not inform us of your separation until you have been separated for 90 consecutive days or more.

If your marital status changes, you may have to send another application before September 1, 2018, to continue receiving the WITB advance payments.

Call 1-800-959-8281 to tell us about any of the following changes:

- you or your spouse or common-law partner no longer meet the WITB eligibility requirements (for more information, go to canada.ca/working-income-tax-benefit);
- your or your spouse's or common-law partner's income changes significantly;
- you ceased to be a resident of Canada; or
- a recipient died.

Definitions

Common-law partner – this applies to a person who is not your spouse, with whom you are in a conjugal relationship, and to whom one of the following situations applies. They:

- have been living with you for at least 12 continuous months;

  Note

  In this definition, 12 continuous months includes any period you were separated for less than 90 days because of a breakdown in the relationship.

- are the parent of your child by birth or adoption; or
- have custody and control of your child (or had custody and control immediately before the child turned 19 years of age) and your child is wholly dependent on that person for support.

Eligible dependant – for WITB purposes, an eligible dependant is a person who meets all of the following conditions. They are:

- your or your spouse's or common-law partner's child;
- under 19 years of age and living with you on December 31, 2018; and
- not eligible for the WITB for 2018.

Separated – you are separated when you start living separate and apart from your spouse or common-law partner because of a breakdown in the relationship for a period of at least 90 days and you have not reconciled.

Once you have been separated for 90 days (because of a breakdown in the relationship), the effective day of your separated status is the day you started living separate and apart.

Note

You are still considered to have a spouse or common-law partner if there is no breakdown in the relationship and you were living apart because of:

- work;
- studies;
- health problems.

Spouse – this applies only to a person to whom you are legally married.
